

BARES DEAL IN U. S.
AMBASSADORSHIPS

Letter Tendering Russian Post
to Editor for Year
Signed by Senator
Lewis.

SAYS BRYAN BACKS OFFER

If President Insists on Pindell's Nomination Inquiry Will Be Demanded—Latter Denies Receiving the Communication.

[From The Tribune Bureau.]

Washington, Nov. 8.—Members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee forewarned themselves to-day to force the administration to explain the circumstance of the selection of Henry M. Pindell, an Illinois editor, to the ambassadorship of Russia, with the understanding, as it is reported, that he resign at the end of a year.

A letter written, it is alleged, by Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, to Mr. Pindell, assuring him that he would not be expected to undertake any diplomatic negotiations with the Russian government during his term of office and that he would have an excellent opportunity to visit the capitals of Northern Europe if he would agree to accept the post for a brief time only, became public to-day.

Mr. Pindell, who is editor of "The Peoria Journal," and who was certified to Washington to-day by Russia as persona grata, said at his Peoria office that the published letter had never been received by him.

Senator Lewis Evasive.

Senator Lewis, who is in Chicago, while not denying that he had written the letter to Mr. Pindell, said:

"If Mr. Pindell says he did not receive the letter he must be right. I have with me no copies of my correspondence with him."

If the President persists in his purpose to appoint Mr. Pindell and sends in his nomination a resolution will be offered requesting him to inform the Senate whether or not the conditions set forth in Senator Lewis's letter, upon the authority, as he says, of Mr. Bryan himself, are correct. It might even go so far as to ask the President whether or not similar conditions have been imposed upon any other diplomatic officers who have been rewarded for their services to himself and the party.

Neither at the State Department nor at the White House was there any comment forthcoming or any explanation of the extraordinary conditions which Senator Lewis says were attached to the appointment of Mr. Pindell. When the question was put to Mr. Bryan whether the place was offered to Pindell with the understanding that he resign at the end of a year and the assurance that he would not be called upon to perform any diplomatic service in that time, he refused, with a show of indignation, to reply.

Name To Be Sent In.

At the White House there was no indication that the President, in view of the publication of Senator Lewis's letter, would save himself the embarrassment of refusing to reply to an inquiry from the Senate by nominating some one else to be Ambassador to Russia.

It is entirely probable that the majority will stand by him and refuse to pass a resolution asking him for the desired information, but there is little doubt that if he stands by his decision the Foreign Relations Committee will find some other way of ascertaining the

$2,500 FOR BROKEN HEART

Miss Uhlig Gets Judgment
Against Hospital Surgeon.

Miss Edna Uhlig, of Arlington, N. J., daughter of a typewriter inventor, has obtained a judgment for $2,500 against Dr. Arthur H. Nylen, of the Norwegian Hospital, in Brooklyn, whom she sued for breach of promise.

Miss Uhlig and Dr. Nylen were engaged for three years, when the physician sent word to her that his affection had cooled. He offered to marry her if she insisted, but he thought their marriage might prove unhappy for both. Miss Uhlig did not insist, but sued for breach of promise, and Dr. Nylen made no defence.

MAY IMPRISON MOTHER

Son Has Her Adjudged in Contempt for Failure to Pay.

Justice Seabury signed an order yesterday adjudging Mrs. Cora A. Coffin in contempt of court, and unless she pays $8,600 to her son she may be committed to the Ludlow street jail.

When Coffin was sixteen years old he obtained a verdict of $12,500 from the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company for injuries in the Park avenue tunnel disaster. Mrs. Coffin was appointed guardian for her son. Coffin demanded an accounting when he became of age, but his mother failed to render it. She also failed to turn over to him the money that was left from his judgment against the railroad company. He sued and obtained a judgment.

Failing to receive his money, Coffin proceeded to have his mother adjudged in contempt of court.

FROM DINNER TO JAIL

Man Held as Burglar Threatened to Kill, Says Woman.

William Van Steenburg, thirty-two years old, was arrested last night in his home, No. 1235 Webster avenue, The Bronx, charged with robbing the home of Mrs. Ella Greenberger, of No. 107 East 123d street. According to Mrs. Greenberger Steenburg entered her apartment last Wednesday night, and when discovered going through the flat he threatened to kill her three-year-old daughter Kate if the mother gave the alarm. Fearing the burglar would carry out the threat Mrs. Greenberger showed the way to a bureau drawer, from which he took two diamond rings valued at several hundred dollars. The burglar then put on Mr. Greenberger's overcoat and departed by the rear kitchen window.

He was seen passing over the roofs by a neighbor, and from her description he was recognized as a man who was a frequent visitor to the apartment of the janitor of one of the houses.

When arrested he was sitting down to dinner with his wife and two children. Steenburg was identified at the East 126th street police station by Mrs. Greenberger and her daughter.

"JEFF" LEVY FOR SENATOR

Seeks to Succeed Root, but Appears a Little Evasive.

[From The Tribune Bureau.]

Washington, Nov. 8.—Wearing a high silk hat, a diamond pin and that prize overcoat, Representative "Jeff" Levy, of New York, drifted into the House press gallery to-day and proclaimed that he would be in the race for the United States Senate in the primaries next year.

"Has it been announced?" Mr. Levy was asked.

"I am announcing it now. Maybe it's too early to say so. No, let it go. Just say I'll be in the race against Senator Root and the others."

"That means you will not be a candidate to succeed yourself in the House?"

"Now, that's getting matters down to a plain point," expostulated Mr. Levy. "I'll cross that bridge when I get to it."

Mr. Levy was silent when it was suggested that he could not be a candidate for both places at once. Mr. Levy was also "sure he didn't know" when it was hinted that William Sulzer might want to come back to the House from the district now represented by Levy, but formerly dominated by Sulzer.

"Perhaps Sulzer will run for the Governorship," said Mr. Levy, reassuringly.

"What about fighting the further leadership of Murphy? Are you going to get into the fight?"

"I am a peaceable man and don't like fighting," replied the prospective Senatorial candidate.

As he walked away Mr. Levy reminded the few newspaper men present that 75 per cent of the provisions of the Glass-Owen currency bill are in accord with a bill he introduced in April, but that nobody had given him credit for it.

"Tut! tut! I'll be hanged if it's so," said Representative Glass when asked about this statement later.

BOARDER PROVES A LEPER

Entertained Unaware Three Months at One Place.

Malden, Mass., Nov. 8.—Boarders at a Malden house learned to-day that for three months a leper had been among them. Discovery came when Hyman Klein, twenty-three years old, went to the Boston City Hospital to obtain treatment for a skin disease.

Physicians there found his affliction to be leprosy. He was placed in the detention hospital, prior to being sent to the leper colony on Ponikese Island.

Genoa, Nov. 8.—The Countess Depolo, of a noble Venetian family and wife of Captain Ogdoni, quartered at San Remo, shot an orderly to-day. The countess said that the man had entered her apartment and had attacked her.

MITCHEL'S POLICY THAT OF GAYNOR

Mayor-Elect Tells Merchants
He Will Not Remove Officeholders Who Are Faithful to City.

ADVANCE THE KEYNOTE

Mayor Kline, Whitman and Victorious Fusion Candidates
Join in Cheering for Head of New Administration at Association's Dinner.

Mayor-elect John Purroy Mitchel, as the guest of honor of the Merchants' Association, outlined his plans of administration at the annual dinner of the association in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel last night. In a nutshell, he said his policy will be to carry out the plans laid down during the administration of Mayor Gaynor in a manner that would do credit to the best private corporation by administration officials selected for their ability and efficiency above every other consideration.

The Mayor-elect let it be known that he has a high regard for the trained officials now in the employ of the city, and intimated that wherever possible he would not turn them out of office for the sake of appointing their successors.

It was the largest dinner ever given by the association. So many wanted tickets that it was necessary to set tables in the parquet boxes. Above these scores of women in brilliant costumes looked down through the haze of smoke, and applauded the Mayor-elect when he arose to speak. Mr. Mitchel was in poor voice, owing to the severe strain he underwent during the campaign, but as he, warmed up to his speech he improved until he was heard in every corner of the great ballroom.

Judge McCall Not There.

The dinner was arranged before the election. Mr. Mitchel and Judge Edward E. McCall, both the Mayorality candidates, agreed to be present. Just before Judge McCall went to Hot Springs last Wednesday he sent word to the dinner committee that he would not be able to attend.

The warmth with which the Mayor-elect was received upon his introduction by William A. Marble, toastmaster, has seldom been surpassed in Mr. Boldt's big dining room. It was really a reception to the city administration present and future. Mayor Adolph L. Kline, District Attorney Charles S. Whitman, Borough Presidents George McAneny, Maurice E. Connolly and Lewis H. Pounds, Marcus M. Marks, Charles J. McCormack and Douglas S. Mathewson, were on the dais.

One of the first to get to his feet waving a napkin when Mr. Mitchel was introduced was Mr. Whitman.

William A. Marble, the toastmaster, caused a laugh when he said that one of the statements made during the campaign which had not been denied was that Mr. Mitchel was a young man. He said there were some criticisms made about his age by men who had passed the Oyster stage that the Mayor-elect was too young to be the business manager of the greatest business organization in the world.

"If this is true," said the toastmaster, "we business men hold that it is no detriment whatever, but rather a benefit, as we believe in young blood, and his youth is a condition which the Mayor-elect will outgrow."

"We heartily agree with one of the great writers of this city who recently said regarding him, 'More years are not the test of either maturity or utility of those years. It is rather preparedness.' And it must be admitted that Mr. Mitchel will take the office with great preparedness, and the years which lie before him give him a promise of a rare career, and it is hard to say where his services to the people may not lead him."

Mitchel Praises McAneny.

The Mayor-elect began by saying that he got his first assistance in public life from the Merchants' Association. It was when he was investigating the office of Borough President Ahearn and the Fire Department. No organization, he said, rendered more efficient aid than that of the merchants, and it resulted in making possible good pavements for Manhattan, as evidenced by the perfection to which Borough President McAneny had brought them. Every mention of Mr. McAneny's name brought loud applause.

Continuing, Mr. Mitchel said:

"Now, gentlemen, I face these almost overwhelming problems of the administration of the Mayorality of this city. I am quite conscious of what has happened in this election. I fully understand that the result is in no sense of the word whatsoever a personal triumph, that means the vindication of a principle and the triumph of a cause."

"It means that the citizenship of this city has rendered a verdict in favor of a continuance and a carrying forward into other and broader fields of the kind of government that we in the Board of Estimate have tried to give the city during the last three years and a half."

"The problem of the next four years will be to carry forward and develop that kind of government and to apply it to all the departments, all the bureaus, all the sub-divisions, of this

ROOSEVELTS AID
IN SAVING GIRLS

LURED FROM NEW YORK

Young Women Win Friends on Passage Down, and They Acted When Nature of Music Hall Where They Were Under Contract Was Learned.

Two young American girls whom Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt and other passengers on the steamship Vandyck saved from a questionable theatrical engagement in Rio de Janeiro arrived yesterday by the Lamport & Holt liner Vestris.

A timely note from Mrs. Roosevelt to the American Ambassador to Brazil and to the American Consul at Rio de Janeiro helped the girls after they were taken to court for alleged breach of contract, and enabled them to get aboard the Vestris, which brought them here yesterday.

The girls to whom Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt took such a fancy during the voyage south on the Vandyck are Miss Gladys Waddell, of No. 64 West 104th street, and Miss Joan Shore, of Chicago. Both said yesterday when they came ashore from the Vestris that they were through with the stage forever and that they wished no notoriety for themselves or the "good Americans" who had befriended them six thousand miles from home.

Girl Tells Her Story.

Miss Waddell, who is seventeen, decided later, when she learned that other passengers on the Vestris were talking about their vicissitudes in Rio, that it would be better to tell the story from beginning to end and avoid misstatements.

In the course of her narrative it was learned that the British Consul at Rio de Janeiro had been greatly annoyed by the action of the Brazilian police in preventing her from boarding the Vestris. He thought at first that the young woman had been forcibly taken from the Vandyck, a British vessel, by the Brazilian police, and declared that he would use all his power to prevent such procedure.

Miss Waddell said yesterday that she had gone upon the stage when fifteen, and for the last two years had been playing with Edith Talafiero in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." Thinking to make more money in vaudeville, she and Miss Shore, who is nineteen, arranged a vaudeville sketch in September, and when an offer was made for their appearance in Rio de Janeiro they accepted.

They signed a contract with an American theatrical man who lives in Buenos Ayres and books American attractions for the stage in Brazil and the Argentine. Their passage was prepaid by him, and the three sailed on the Vandyck with Colonel Roosevelt on October 4.

During the voyage the two girls became popular with all the passengers, particularly with Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss L. Margaret, their niece and daughter of W. Emlen Roosevelt, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bradley, of Dubuque, Iowa, and their daughter Elizabeth. They participated in the entertainments aboard ship, and their singing and dancing soon made them many friends. Miss Waddell danced the Highland fling with the colonel.

When about ten days out of port several women passengers asked the girls if they knew the character of the amusement place where they were expected to appear in Rio, and they said they did not. They said their contract was with the manager who had taken them with him from New York, but they learned later that he had merely acted as an agent for the manager of a music hall in Rio.

Presently there was a conference of passengers, headed by the Roosevelts and the Bradleys, and it was decided, with the consent of the girls, that they should not be permitted to appear in the music hall. The price of their return passage and money for incidental expenses were promptly subscribed, under the approval of Captain Anthony Cadogan, the ship's master. Hugh Nelson, of London; W. C. MacKenzie, of New York; and J. T. Fagan, all of New York, and familiar with Rio de Janeiro, begged of the girls to return at once on the Vestris.

Rio Police Appear.

A wireless message was sent ashore for a launch when the Vandyck anchored outside the harbor, and when it came out to the vessel the girls and their hand baggage were put aboard and the launch was ordered to go in to the quay where the Vestris lay.

"That was the time when our troubles began," said Miss Waddell. "The man in the launch was instructed to put us aboard the Vestris, but when we came alongside and Miss Shore and I were ready to climb aboard a Brazilian policeman prevented our boarding. Just as we were repulsed another launch with Brazilian policemen in it came up to us and ordered our launch ashore."

That was where Mrs. Roosevelt's foresight helped the girls, as her notes to the American Minister and the

DRAFTS LAW TO CHECK
TICKET SPECULATION

District Attorney Aims to Prevent Further Scandals at World's Series Games.

District Attorney Whitman has finished his investigation of the baseball ticket speculation scandal and has drafted an ordinance which he believes will prevent a repetition of it. A thorough inquiry into the whole situation was made by Leslie S. Lockhart, one of Mr. Whitman's assistants. Mr. Lockhart made his report yesterday to the District Attorney.

It was found that the only instances of tickets passing directly into the hands of speculators were sales at a premium by ticket sellers on the grounds. So far as Mr. Lockhart could discover, no one in receipt of tickets in advance of the regular sale disposed of any direct to speculators. In a number of instances, however, tickets which the recipient had sold or given to his acquaintances found their way into the hands of speculators.

James E. Caffrey, of the Boston Baseball Club, who complained bitterly that he was not able to get enough tickets at the regular rate to satisfy his friends, although they were readily obtainable at a premium, was one of those whose tickets went astray. It developed in the investigation that Mr. Caffrey sold a box at the regular price, $75, to Isidor Mehrbach, of Flis, Doerr & Carroll.

Isidor Mehrbach resold it to Irving Mehrbach, of No. 37 Liberty street, and half an hour later Leo Newman, a speculator, sold it for $300 at the Lambs Club.

Trace Police Captain's Ticket.

Six $3 seats sold by the McBride Ticket Agency have been identified as part of the lot of tickets delivered to Police Captain Kreucher, of the Ralph Avenue station, in Brooklyn. Captain Kreucher got 150 tickets, and 90 of them went to saloonkeepers.

Besides these incidents, it was found that members of the Dougherty military police furnished by the Dougherty Detective Agency to the baseball club had been improving their opportunity. Harry V. Dougherty, head of the agency, is the brother of George S. Dougherty, Deputy Police Commissioner.

According to Mr. Lockhart's report, members of the "military police" were openly demanding and receiving $1 each from those who wanted to get through the lines, and were also selling seats in the first three rows, which were being "held down" by boys. Mr. Lockhart was told of one man who paid a Dougherty policeman $2 for the privilege of sitting on a beer keg in the aisle.

Mr. Lockhart found that most of the speculation was in the $3 seats, and according to statements made by representatives of various ticket agencies between 1,050 and 1,200 seats were sold. The baseball club, Mr. Lockhart says, did all in its power to prevent speculation.

It was found that, besides the tickets distributed among newspapers, baseball officials, players and employees, "sets" of tickets for the series in New York were delivered as follows:

Police Captain William F. Day, 100; J. H. Tonjes, Colonial Hotel, 25 and two boxes; Tonjes's partner, 19; George S. Dougherty, Deputy Police Commissioner, 83; Winfield R. Sheehan, Commissioner Waldo's secretary, 26; Greenwood Club, 35; Captain John C. Cray, Police Department, 4; Captain Kreucher, Police Department, 50; Joseph F. Prendergast, Deputy City Clerk, 8; Alderman J. J. White, for Board of Aldermen, 50; Doonan and Wren, Hotel Braddock, 20. James Foster, for the Fire Department, got 25 seats of the

HARVARD BEATS

GOAL FROM FIELD

Three Points.

BIG CROWD SITS IN RAIN

Mahan Breaks Loose for Two Brilliant Dashes, While Brickley
Shines Again with a Sixty-
Yard Run—Ballin a
Star for Princeton.

[By Herbert.]

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.]

Princeton, Nov. 8.—Charley Brickley, whose name is becoming synonymous for football deeds, kicked a goal from the field on the soggy gridiron here to-day, and thereby hangs a story of victory for Harvard and defeat for Princeton in their yearly battle at football.

The score was 3 to 0, but fully 25,000 men and women, who reeked not of the rain, which fell in intermittent showers, to satisfy what has become almost a lust for the game, will bear witness that even these 3 points were hardly a fair measure between the two eleven.

The Tigers suffered not a whit in comparison with their more experienced opponents, except, perhaps, in tackling—one of the fundamentals of the game. Two, at least, of the Harvard men—Brickley and Mahan—were the more brilliant, and electrified the crowd with three or four dashing and blood stirring runs which fairly dragged one up standing, but in team effort and other points that go to make up the finished eleven there was little to choose, mighty little.

Blocked Punt Hurts Princeton.

One blocked punt was the undoing of Princeton, as it gave Harvard the chance to strike and Charley Brickley the opportunity to use what may almost be called his cunning toe. Captain Storer of Harvard aided and abetted in landing this scoring punch, for he was the man who broke through and blocked the ball as Law punted early in the second period, and then, following it up as it bounded back toward the Princeton goal line, fell on it only twenty yards away from that point to which all football players yearn.

It was Harvard's first chance, and quickly was the advantage taken. Hardwick failed to gain an inch as he launched himself into the Princeton line, but Bradlee tore off four yards and Logan added five more on a fake forward pass formation. It was the fourth down, however, and Harvard's confidence in Brickley was emphasized when Logan called for a drop kick instead of another running play, although a scant two yards was all that was needed for a first down.

Brickley was equal to the trust reposed in him, as he has been on so many other occasions. Standing on the 20-yard line, he took a perfect pass from Soucy and, drawing back his leg, sent his foot crashing against the ball. It rose straight and true to the mark and fairly whirled over the cross bar and directly between the posts. So one of the marvels of football earned another victory for his team and brought discomfiture, although hardly gloom, to Princeton.

Baker Shoots at Harvard Goal.

The Tigers had equal opportunities with the Crimson to score. In fact, it may be said that they had six to Harvard's five, with three of them of a kind that might well have been accepted, except for the soggy field and slippery ball. Captain Hobey Baker shot four drop kicks and one try from placement toward the goal posts, but to no avail, while once Harvard took the ball on downs on her own 14-yard line by checking Princeton's running attack when the distance that made all the difference between a first down and the loss of the ball for Princeton was hardly more than an inch or two, and had to be carefully measured by Dave Fultz, the head linesman.

Brickley missed one goal from placement and two others of the drop kick variety, and lost another chance by an unusual incident in football. He had dropped back for the kick when Percy D. Houghton or one of the other Harvard coaches sent a substitute rushing on the field, who, so it looked from the stands, was so anxious to whisper something to Logan at quarterback that he failed to report to the referee, or else was overheard carrying a message from the sidelines.

In any case, Billy Langford imposed a penalty against Harvard of fifteen yards, and showed no disposition to listen to a mild protest. This necessi-

AGED WOMAN CHASES THIEF

Companion Also in Pursuit, but $600 Earrings Vanish.

A crowd in East 11th street saw two women, one of them seventy-five years old, chasing a man and crying "Stop thief!" yesterday afternoon, but no one attempted to assist in the pursuit. The women were Mrs. Catherine Russell, a wealthy widow, of Pittsburgh, whose diamond earrings had just been torn from her ears, and her cousin, Mrs. Mary O'Neill, of No. 106 East 12th street.

The two women were on their way to a market at 11th street and First avenue, when Mrs. Russell felt a touch at the neck. It instantly occurred to her that some one from Pittsburgh had recognized her and that she would pretend not to pay any attention to keep up the joke.

Then there was a hard tug at her ears, and, putting up her hands, she found that her diamond earrings, worth $600, were gone. The two women saw a man running away and they chased him as far as the old cemetery between First and Second avenues, where he disappeared among the tombs.

Mrs. Russell described the thief at the station house as an Italian, about twenty-five years old and 5 feet 5 inches tall.

SERMON IN MIDST OF PLAY

Girls in Tights and Grease Paint
Stop to Hear Clergyman.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.]

Philadelphia, Nov. 8.—Surrounded by chorus girls in tights and grease paint, the Rev. Dr. James B. Ely mounted the stage of the Casino Theatre here to-night, where in the midst of a burlesque show he reminded those present that to-morrow was the Sabbath and implored them to stop and think if only for a second of the hereafter.

As the blackface and his partner finished a "Texas Tommy" song and dance the doctor was introduced. The chorus girls did not run to the dressing room, but stayed and listened. The men in the audience did not go out during the intermission for their customary drink or smoke, but quietly remained in their seats and listened to the few words that the doctor said.

MORPHEUS AIDS BURGLARS

Crooks Drug Victims and Rob

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.]

Parrell, Penn., Nov. 8.—Scientific burglars paid a visit to this place last night, and thirty-eight residents are suffering to-day from the effects of a powerful narcotic, as well as grief over the loss of property. Several of the victims are under the care of physicians, who are attempting to discover what the sleep producing drug was.

The police have found that three strange men in an automobile were seen near the outskirts of the town shortly before daylight. Several thousand dollars in cash and a large quantity of jewelry, besides other valuables, were secured by the burglars.

MINE STRIKERS KILL FIVE

Shoot Four to Death in Automobile in Colorado.

Laveta, Col., Nov. 8.—One miner and three guards from the Oakview mine near here were killed to-day when they were ambushed while returning to the mine. The miner had come to Laveta to visit a dentist. When he started to return to the mine he was surrounded by strikers.

Three guards rescued the miner and started for the mine in an automobile. The party was attacked, and in the exchange of shots the occupants of the automobile were killed.

Pedro Armijo, a miner who has been working near Aguilar, was killed to-day by a shot fired from ambush while being escorted out of town by a marshal who had just rescued Armijo
